

PASSING OUT THE NUTS AND BOLTS OF SUCCESS

Kyunta McCoy (right) of Phillips Community College advises a prospective student

Transferring knowledge from those who have it to those who need it is society's biggest challenge, and the Boys, Girls, Adults Community Development Center takes that challenge seriously. Every spring it devotes a day—Community Outreach Day—to making it happen on multiple fronts in the hope many people will find vital bits of knowledge that will trigger their careers, their hopes, their health, and their happiness.

That knowledge may be paying for college, the availability of scholarships, trade information, personal finances, nutrition or other necessities of life. On Community Outreach Day, specialists in all those fields are available to counsel people of the Marvell-Elaine community and to share contacts that can provide more help in reaching goals, whether they are financial, educational, social, economic, emotional or physical prosperity.

To answer people's questions and to address their concerns, BGACDC's 18–39 Parental Empowerment Program and Delta Visual and Performing Arts partnered with a number of commercial and professional vendors, including the Phillips Community College of the University of Arkansas, The Concerned Citizens of Marvell, M. M. Tate, the Elaine Legacy Center, Women Empowering Network, D&S Enterprises and Marvell Occasions. Incentives were provided, such as cleaning supplies, food resources, job contacts and networking incentives.

Community Outreach Day 2022 was again a successful event.